PROFESSIONAL SUMMARY

Multidisciplinary designer with six years in design, three of them in product. I build brand identity systems and the digital products they live inside, across construction technology, fintech, publishing, interiors and professional bodies. Brand strategy, visual identity, UI/UX design, design systems, web, campaign, print and motion.

I treat design as problem solving. If the problem is still there at the end, the work is not finished, whatever it looks like. That standard is also why my range is wide. Brand projects kept needing websites, campaigns kept needing decks, and I learned each discipline rather than pass the client to someone else, so I can take a problem from the first question to the thing that ships without a handover in the middle.

I trained as a Quantity Surveyor, which is why the construction technology work reads the way it does, and I build what I design. My portfolio is designed and coded by me.

SELECTED WORK

- ADLM Studio — Brand, Design System, Website and Product Suite · LIVE — Six products and no clear way to tell them apart. Audited 112 routes of the legacy site, rebuilt the information architecture around visitor intent, wrote the design system, then designed the marketing site, dashboard, admin surfaces and product UI on it.

- NIQS — Brand and Platform · LIVE, IN USE — Brand strategy and full redesign for a fifty-six-year-old national professional body, followed by the website, member portal, admin dashboard and role-based access model. A template library lets chapters publish their own announcements without a designer.

- YDPay — Brand and Product · BRAND IN USE, APP PENDING — Built the brand from no existing foundation, then redesigned the product across 96 screens and 14 flows on a token-based system, with SpinPop, a gamification layer with its own wallet and lobby. The guideline was adopted and is in use. The app redesign has not been taken into build yet.
